SYNOPSIS:

BROADWAY COMEDY

Eddie Barry and his father live on a small farm where they try their best to keep up the old place but without much success. Pressed for money the father decides that the boy must go to the City and visit his rich uncle, and marry some rich woman. After a sad parting the boy goes to the City and arrives at the home of his uncle where a big party is in progress. The uncle introduces him and he immediately falls for the wiles of a vamp. She proposes marriage and innocent "Eddie" is tricked into a fake marriage. The vamp tells him that their wedding must be kept a secret and Eddie returns home. Later the vamp grows tired and tells him that they are not really married and that he is a ruined man. The shock kills his father and we next see Eddie in a little country town endeavoring to earn money to support his child. The Inn Keeper learns that he is an unmarried husband and turns him out, when he leaves a note pinned to the dress of the child, stating that he is an unmarried husband, and asks that they be kind to little "Oscar".

In his wanderings Eddie comes to a farm where he applies for a job. He is about to be turned away when the girl intercedes for him and he is given a job. She falls in love with him and asks him to marry her and he, broken-heartedly tells her that he can never be the husband of any good woman. In the meantime, the vamp has come to her country place, which is across the way from the little farm, and as she is desirous of marrying the son of the farmer, she tells Eddie he must leave. This Eddie refuses to do until the Inn Keeper, who is a friend of the farmer, tells Eddie's terrible secret. He is driven out into the storm after denouncing the vamp. The girl follows him and rescues him from a horrible death. The vamp, now conscious-stricken, also follows and admits her wrong-doing and says she will make amends and marry him at once. He spurns her even though he had adopted the baby to win her affections and says that he will have nothing more to do with her. She leaves after being soundly thrashed by the girl, and Eddie and the girl are married.
